Hi Geraldine! (or teammates 😊)

My friend Fernando Rodero, who works in Automation at Telefónica, told me about your new opportunities in Data, and I was intrigued. Despite recently entering the Big Data field, I found an ideal fit in the Junior Data Visualization role.

With over 4 years of experience as a data journalist, designer, video editor, I am all visuals. My Youtube Channel, where I use data to tell stories: Why so many young Spaniards want to be public employees?, The Next Generation EU Funds, explained. Check them out!

Since January, I've been immersed in Big Data, completing personal projects (check my GitHub!), online courses, and now pursuing a Master's. I've created visualizations using Sheets, Tableau, Looker, R, Python, Pandas, and ggplot2, producing interactive dashboards, reports, and social media content.

On top of that, I entered the field of Big Data last January, doing my own projects (visit my Github!), online courses, and now a Master's. I have done vizs using sheets, Tableau, Looker, R, Python, Pandas, ggplot2, etc. That is, interactive dashboard, reports, and social media.

I bring a unique blend of visual storytelling, data analysis, and business acumen. My entrepreneurial experience and tenure at Project A Ventures have honed my understanding of client needs and business solutions.

I'm excited about the prospect of joining Telefónica. Fernando speaks highly of the company's volunteering programs, global mindset, and work-life balance, which align with my values.

Looking forward to learning more about the position and Telefónica.

Best regards,

Pablo Serrano Medina
